

Let's Grow Love For Writing

Writing and Prewriting Activities for Early Elementary

Writing Activities:

During Summer break children usually don't like doing work and writing. As a mother and a teacher I think a regular practice of reading and writing help the children to be ready when they go to the higher grades.

Story Writing

Story writing:

For this writing children would need some construction paper. Parents may draw lines for better handwriting. On one side of the paper children will write the other side will be for pictures.

Modification: Depending on the age and the capacity of the child parents can join in writing. That helps to build higher expectation. When parents write, they can model how to write.

Journal Writing

Daily journal writing is a very good habit for any age group. Depending on the child's interest one may choose a topic or write about the whole day.

Children in lower elementary can draw a picture of the most interesting part of the day. Then describe the picture using one or two sentences.
